

Whatever Is Worn - Add Pearls

This year, pearls seem to be replacing diamonds as a girl's best friend—at least in fashion.

If there is one constant factor in this everything-goes season, it is the use of pearls. Collection after collection in the fall showing was accessorized with pearls—the one thing all designers agreed upon. And most often long strands—30 to 60 inches in length.

Why are pearls a favorite accessory? Probably because clothes are more feminine again. The lines are softer, the fabrics are more fluid, even the colors are more sweetly pretty. And this means that women look more like women—and they even feel prettier—especially when they wear pearls.

"LA BELLE EPOQUE" was the inspiration for Oscar de la Renta's fabulous black taffeta evening gown, set off with a deep ruff of black coq feathers. The finishing touch is a 10-strand dog collar of cultured pearls, casually draped.

BEAUTIFUL TWEED is accessorized by Ellen Brooks with pearls. The suit, fringed in great fluffy masses of wool, is worn with pearls knotted for a matching bulky effect.

ROXANNE COORDINATES a dress and coat in two shades of heathered gray wool. In keeping with this color picture, she chose long ropes of blue-gray pearls to tuck through the hip along belt.
